Re: Request for Veto of SB 11, HB18, HB19

Dear Governor Abbott,

We are a coalition of groups and individuals, some partisan and non-partisan, who have come together in opposition to Senate Bill 11 and House Bills 18 and 19.

We greatly appreciate your efforts to make schools safer. Regrettably, we cannot support these bills. SB 11 contained several features that directly addressed school safety. However, it also had provisions of concern. While some groups attempted to get these concerns addressed, the bill was only made worse.

We believe that the use of a psychiatric consortium that has inherent connections to the pharmaceutical industry simply puts Texas children at risk of dangerous psychotropic drugging and policies that lead to same.

As Attorney General you sued numerous drug companies over illegal marketing schemes. We know you are well aware of just how far drug companies can reach into our state programs. In 2012 you settled a lawsuit with Johnson & Johnson related to the marketing of an antipsychotic drug for unapproved populations including children.¹ This was done under the Texas Medication Algorithm Project. Several faculty members from UT medical schools were involved. In other instances, state employees resigned from their jobs over allegations that they worked with drug companies to promote their product in state programs.²

We do not believe a mental health consortium is necessary to school safety. That it is composed of the psychiatry departments of our medical schools; and as our medical schools work closely with pharmaceutical companies, this creates a conflict that cannot be cured.

Assessment for “potential” danger is unreliable, will create injustice

The idea that one could pinpoint those who will “potentially” become dangerous and then get them the “help they need” is abhorrent to us. No one can predict evil. Even if they could, there is nothing to suggest that mental health treatment can prevent it. Absent an immediate and obvious threat, there is no screening, assessment, or interview that can dependably predict future dangerousness. Even the American Psychiatric Association has stated that when it comes to long term predictions of future dangerousness, they get it wrong in at least two out of three cases.³

How many innocent children will be labeled as potential threats and then deprived of precious liberties?

A mental health supervisor for Austin Independent School District’s campus police testified on HB10 that AISD alone had referred over 875 students to Child Protective Services over mental health issues so far this school year. In questioning, it sounded like many of these cases revolved around differences of opinion with parents.

We believe that foster children, special needs children, and children of color will be especially vulnerable to such programs because of biases and stereotypes.

Threat Assessments Are Subjective: Therefore, Mistakes Will Be Made - These Are Not Harmless

Using Threat Assessment Teams to scrutinize children, question children, and offer subjective assessments of risk, without providing true information on the frailties of such assessments, and without full Miranda warnings is an affront to parental and civil rights. The fact that the Texas School Safety Center website features at least one model from another state in which everyone, including the child, is questioned before the child’s parents are brought in make the prospect of Threat Assessment Teams even more disturbing.⁴

We would remind you that Nikolas Cruz was apparently the subject of a threat assessment AND mental health treatment.⁵ This certainly did not prevent the Parkland shooting.

Mental screening for “at-risk” students is notoriously inaccurate with false positive rates as high as 84%.⁶ What defines “at risk”? The problem with mental screening in general and with labeling “at-risk” children with a psychiatric label is that the already admittedly subjective diagnostic criteria are even more difficult to apply to children. The World Health Organization (not known as a conservative group) has said: “Childhood and adolescence being developmental phases, it is difficult to draw clear boundaries between phenomena that are part of normal development and others that are abnormal.”⁷

THE RUTHERFORD INSTITUTE

FAMILY RIGHTS ADVOCACY

We believe that as a result of this mental health approach, perfectly normal children will be given subjective mental health labels, or viewed as potential threats, affecting their rights now and in the future.

Mental Health Education is problematic

We believe that mental health education, as envisioned in SB11 and HB18, is more likely to become an indoctrination tool, a marketing tool, than it is to help children. There are at least two major cases in Texas where books, coloring books, or similar materials were used to either fill hospital beds or steer children toward medication.^{8,9} In addition, some schools are using mindfulness programs that include practices one would associate with Eastern religious practices. This is objectionable to some families. We believe parents, families, and their care providers are best positioned to provide unbiased information, and to decide when or if their children are ready for that discussion.

Psychotropic Drugs, Suicide and Violence

Multiple school shooters and other perpetrators of mass violence have been under the influence of psychotropic drugs or withdrawing from them.¹⁰ Many drugs are associated with risk of suicidal thoughts or behaviors, aggression, hostility, agitation or other violent effects. While legislation was filed that would have at least explored psychotropic drugs in relation to suicide, it went nowhere. We do not support legislation that could exacerbate the problem.

Opening Schools to Private Mental Health Providers Invites Fraud, Abuse

HB18 supports the idea of schools partnering with private mental health providers for those services. This is not otherwise defined. As the bill author filed another bill allowing hospitals to run school mental health clinics, we can only assume HB18 includes private psychiatric hospitals. At this time, a psychiatric hospital company in Arlington is under a criminal indictment alleging, among other things, that patients were illegally held against their will.¹¹ Other hospitals are under suit over similar issues.¹² Our nation's largest chain of psychiatric hospitals is being sued by stockholders alleging similar behavior.¹³ This chain of hospitals has 15 psychiatric hospitals licensed in Texas, plus other facilities under different licensure. In 1992, Texas State Senator Mike Moncrief testified that private psych hospitals in Texas had entered into arrangements with Texas schools to provide counseling services and then referred students for inpatient treatment.¹⁴ We do not want our children to become cash cows for fraudulent schemes.

In Summary

We believe vigilance, hardened campuses and other direct measures, not mental health, not subjective risk assessments would better improve school safety.

We believe that families, their chosen communities, and their churches are charged with our children’s social, emotional, and moral education. There has been increasing controversy over schools teaching about family values, relationships, belief systems or behaviors. Transparency has also been a problem. We do not support legislation that would allow our role, our God given duty, to be undermined by the state.

We recognize that some families may choose psychiatric treatments, including drugs, for their children. We do not believe it is in the best interest of the state or our children for these services to be promoted in schools. This is a family matter.

We believe these bills open up our schools and Texas’s children to fraud and abuse.

We believe these bills favor industry, not families.

Four times as many teens in the U.S. die from accidents as from suicide.¹⁵ Nearly four times as many die from accidents as from homicide.¹⁶ Therefore we find it curious that our state is spending hundreds of millions in these bills for suicide and violence prevention, and not one dime for accident prevention. We want to know why.

We believe that these bills feed into further data on our children being collected and shared.

We believe that these bills codify unsettled science, with no consensus, such as trauma informed care and adverse childhood experiences, into law.

We want our schools to return to their original intent with the focus on academics – reading, writing, mathematics. Let parents and families decide what their children need. Let our churches, communities, and private doctors be the ones we go to when we need help.

¹⁵ <https://www.cdc.gov/nchs/products/databriefs/db37.htm>

¹⁶ Ibid

We believe that the issue of school safety needs more seats at the table, and must involve a diversity of views from parents, faith-based counselors, ministers and groups concerned with our liberties to discuss what is best for our children. These bills do not reflect that diversity.

Therefore, we request that SB11, HB18, and HB19 be vetoed.
